7. HOW TO SUPPORT FLONE INITIATIVE
Flone Initiative is a women-led and run Charitable Trust. Flone generates Knowledge, convenes inclusive Dialogues, Supports women in transportation, and builds the capacity of key stakeholders to contribute to the realization of an equitable and socially just mass transportation ecosystem in Africa.

OUR MISSION

Flone Initiative is working towards the creation of safe, sustainable, and accessible public transportation spaces for women and vulnerable groups in Africa by influencing behavioral change, generating knowledge and movement-building.

OUR VISION

We envision a world where everyone can experience all freedoms of mobility.
OUR APPROACH

Our interventions focus on three significant areas: Generate knowledge, Movement building and Behavioral change.

OUR PROGRAMS

1. Women In Transport

Flone Initiative through the Women in Transportation (WIT) program seeks to identify and address the barriers for entry into public transport while advocating for safe spaces and improved working conditions for women by addressing stigma, conducting capacity-building workshops to promote professional development, and offering support to public transport organizations to increase access of public transport to vulnerable groups.

2. Usalama wa Uma

Program to train public transport providers (mostly male workers) to prevent sexual harassment, gender sensitization, customer service and personal and professional development.

3. Women And Transport Africa Conference

The purpose of the conference is to stimulate thinking and research on transportation issues central to the older persons, disabled people, children & caregivers and women's quality of life in Africa. The idea is to look backward, take stock of what has been accomplished, and explore methods of translating research and lived experiences into practice.
The Women and Transport Africa Conference objectives are;

a. To stimulate and highlight new research on women, children and PWDs and mobility issues in Africa.

b. To bring together civil society, policy makers, city authorities, researchers, academicians, practitioners and students amongst other stakeholders from the African region to discuss and highlight solutions to the longstanding issues relating to women, children and PWDs and transportation.

c. To support and give a platform to practitioners to share their experiences, challenges and inform policy, research and interventions.

4. Report It Stop It

Flone Initiative's Report it! Stop it! The application was established to facilitate mapping SGBV hotspots in the public transport systems and their associated spaces. The data collected is used to inform intervention areas for Flone Initiative. The platform is also accessible via google search at http://floneinitiative.org/ushahidi/. You can download the application from PlayStore/AppStore available at https://viewer.flone-risi.org/

5. Research

The program seeks to generate and expand knowledge in the areas of inclusive mobility. It aims to fill the data gap that explores the connection between gender and sustainable mobility in Africa by conducting research.
WOMEN IN TRANSPORT

The program seeks to attract, retain and advance women in transport by bridging the gender skills gaps and promoting safe, inclusive and sustainable transport systems free from sexual and gender-based violence. In 2021 the organization implemented the following need-based projects:

1. Professional Conductors Scholarship

In Kenya, women account for about 7% of the public transport workforce. With more women expressing the desire to join the sector as public transport conductors, Flone partnered with Kenya Bus Services to support five women with a fully-funded scholarship to train as professional conductors. This was a pilot project whose outcome would inform future projects. A conductor is a staff member who works closely with the driver and the commuters. S/he collects commuter fares, drops and picks passengers and performs other customer service tasks. For the longest time, the role has not required any form of training; individuals would learn on the job. By December 2021, 4 out of the five graduates had already secured employment as conductors. The organization is looking forward to supporting more women, having recorded an 80% success rate.

2. Women Rights in Public Transport: Nairobi

In 2021 there was an increase in cases of harassment against female public transport operators and commuters as a way of enforcing COVID 19 Regulations. In Mombasa, ferry services were halted and a few lives lost from police brutality. According to the Guardian, the social justice centers were in the forefront of condemning police brutality against members of the public in 2020 and 2021. One of the cases involved a brutal physical assault of a female public transport conductor. After cross-examination and situational analysis, Flone Initiative realized that the majority of the women did not know their fundamental human rights while at work. It was also evident that violence against women was still prevalent and normalized.

In collaboration with Kayole Community Justice Center; experts in human rights advocacy and dispute arbitration; and DIX HUIT Sacco, Flone Initiative organized a human rights training workshop with 27 women in transport professionals along the Eastlands route of Nairobi County. The training targeted public transport operators from Kayole, Dandora, Huruma, Komarock, Donholm, Kariobangi, BuruBuru and Babadogo. The training incorporated open discussions, lived experiences and expert interventions to the most pressing questions. The participants were also equipped with hotline and emergency contacts to call whenever their rights were violated.

The social justice center shared contacts of the independent policing authority (IPOA) and International Medical Legal Unit (IMLU).
In 2020, 58% of women in Nairobi lost their jobs due to Covid 19 pandemic. As a result, some women were defaulting on rent, others had to relocate to the upcountry, while others could not raise an income to cater for their daily meals. As a result, the organization shifted attention to humanitarian response to heed the cry of the jobless women. Additionally, the organization sought to promote long-term economic empowerment among women in Transport to help during unprecedented pandemics and prepare them for dignified retirement processes. The organization conducted training on financial management in March 2021 and in April 2022 and as a result, the women kicked off their monthly table banking activities. In total, 67 women were trained in table banking: 16 women in Nairobi and 29 in Mombasa formed two table banking groups each. The four groups have elected officials and convene each month to save and borrow short-term loans. Two groups from Nairobi are legally registered as self-help groups as such can apply for grants and loans from governmental and non-governmental organizations to invest in long-term projects. By the end of 2021, the women groups had multiplied their income in the revolving fund by 200% of the projected savings. The organization conducted a six months check-in with Nairobi, where it was observed that the women had started to diversify their incomes to investing in small businesses and supplementing their incomes to cover other expenses like paying school fees for their children. Their long-term aspirations were to invest in the transport sector as Public Transport Vehicles (PSV) owners.
4. Sexual and Reproductive Health Rights (SRHR); Mombasa

The workshop was discussed and agreed upon during the WIT needs assessment in Mombasa. Flone organized this workshop that brought together 37 women. The workshop identified that women continued to suffer immensely, with some lacking the autonomy to make informed decisions regarding their sexual reproductive health in public spaces and households. While working, women leave their children under the watch of their neighbors, family, or domestic workers hence it proves difficult to identify when the children are violated. With the majority of the women being rendered jobless and forced to stay at home, they lacked a platform to share their experiences. Nationally, most government offices were operating remotely, making it hard for the women to access psychosocial and legal services regarding SRHR violations. The training workshop provided more information on different forms of harassment at the workplace and at the household, where to report, and the procedures for handling sexual and gender-based violence cases at the family and workplace. They were furnished with toll-free hotlines to access psychosocial support while at work or home. The trained women were commissioned to be SRHR goodwill ambassadors to young girls and fellow women at the grassroots level.
5. TukTuk Drivers Scholarship

The scholarship supported two women from Mombasa to train as professional tuk-tuk drivers. This was a pilot project that the organization would use to implement similar projects in the county. The project is still ongoing. We shall be sharing the outcome and impact in our monthly newsletter.

6. Women In Transport Association

In 2021 the Association had a membership capacity of over 150 women from across Kenya. The Association brings together Women In transport professionals, researchers, policymakers and other female transport enthusiasts. The Association is expanding its membership subscription to women in transport across the globe. The platform has recently launched its online database to provide a platform for women to secure employment opportunities and provide a platform for employers to source for great talents.

5. 4th Women and Transport Africa Virtual Conference

The conference, in its fourth year, has since brought together over six hundred and ninety (690) participants from 35 countries ranging from civil society, policymakers, city authorities, researchers, academicians, practitioners, women transport workers & and investors, and students, amongst other stakeholders from across the world to discuss and highlight solutions to the longstanding issues relating to Women, Children & Caregivers and Persons With Disabilities and the Older persons in transportation.

The Conference had 63 panelists, 15 male and 48 female panelists, with a total of 23 sessions that were divided into 3 three themes: Day 1: Lived Experiences, Day 2: Research, and Day 3: Program and Policy Interventions. The average attendees per day were 135 and 55 per given time—the total number of views and Engagements on our social media platforms were 295 & 144, respectively The total number of Impressions was 62,761.

We introduced an award-giving ceremony during this year’s conference where six women were awarded for standing out in the transport industry.

USALAMA WA UMA PROGRAM

The transport sector continues to be male-dominated, with immense gaps in power relations. This program seeks to engage men as agents of change by training them on gender mainstreaming in the transport sector. The aim is to influence the behavior and mindset of men towards women using and working in the transport sector. The program questions the societal norms and customs that promote discrimination and exclusion of women in transport. In the end, the trained individuals serve as agents of change by implementing gender-sensitive initiatives at their places of work, including customer service charters, sexual harassment policies, codes of conduct and amending their human resources policies to promote the employment of women in transport.
USALAMA WA UMA PROGRAM

Some of the activities carried out in 2021 included:

1. Gender Mainstreaming & Human Rights in Public Transport Workshop; Komarock Nairobi

The workshop was organized as an intervention to create awareness on fundamental human rights, gender mainstreaming processes, and a call to action among the operators to advocate for safe spaces for women and girls free from sexual and gender-based violence. The workshop brought 103 operators, union leaders and managers on board from the DIX HUIT and Prime-T Savings and Credit Cooperative Organization(SACCOs). The workshop was organized after one of the female public transport operators was physically assaulted by police officers along Kariobangi Roundabout Nairobi. The operator sustained severe injuries that left her hospitalized. In pursuit of justice, the operator lost her job due to the prolonged process of accessing justice. The police interfered with the process since it involved one of their colleagues. The police further threatened her if she continued to pursue justice. The case was informally settled, with the operator feeling deprived of access to justice. The operator recommended training her peers on their rights at the workplace and supporting victims and survivors of sexual and gender-based violence, primarily women. From the workshop, the participants portrayed an improved understanding of their rights. They also pledged to support women working in their SACCOs. They also vowed to condemn and address any forms of SGBV in their respective routes. They also recommended a dialogue between the police and the public transport operators to address the hostility issues.

Collaboratively Flone Initiative and Community Social Justice Centers organized the workshop targeting operators and traffic police from the Eastlands routes of Nairobi County. The dialogue in December 2021 was a proposed intervention by participants of the gender mainstreaming and human rights training workshop in Komarock Kayole, Nairobi, in July 2021. The follow-up workshop was deemed to bring together the public transport operators and the traffic police to bridge the hostility gap between the two players. The workshop brought 50 participants representing the traffic police, SACCO officials, Boda Boda Association of Kenya and women in transport association representatives. The arbitration process was facilitated and led by the Community Social Justice Center. Some of the concerns from the operators included physical harassment, being subjected to unnecessary arrests, demand for bribes and the police not wearing uniforms, thus making it hard for the operators to differentiate between criminal gangs and the police.

On the other hand, the police were concerned by operators intentionally defying the traffic rules, including forgery of legal documents and failure to comply with Government regulations on COVID-19. The dialogue created a platform for the two sides to engage in plenary discussions on ensuring their work interactions promoted a safe and conducive working environment for all and created safe commutes to the members of the public. From the workshop, the police volunteered to train the operators on road safety, their rights while on the road, and legal provisions protecting them as per the Kenyan Constitution 2010.
3. Gender Mainstreaming Workshop Mombasa

The workshop was organized to create awareness about gender issues in transport, including the exclusion of women, sexual and gender-based violence, taking active roles in advocating for active engagement of women in the transport sector. The workshop was attended by 27 participants representing SACCO leaders, Union leaders, tuk-tuk drivers, BodaBoda riders, Kenya Ferry workers, Kenya Ports Authority representatives, Matatu drivers, and conductors from the Coastal region. The stakeholders benefited from skills on implementing gender-sensitive leadership styles, skills to mainstream gender in their respective capacities, in addition to learning gender concepts that are typically misinterpreted and misunderstood. From the workshop, 10 participants volunteered to be trained as ToTs on gender mainstreaming for the coastal region.

4. Behaviour and Attitude Test Workshop Mombasa

Being one of its kind, the workshop brought together 12 Public transport stakeholders to discuss the general perception of women working in the transport sector. The participants discussed the norms, stereotypes, prejudices towards women working in the industry. It was observed that women working in the transport sector are strong enough to handle public transport jobs. It was also noted that women could be as productive as men if they can be capacitated with skills and the platform to explore their potentials freely. On the other hand, It was observed that women's empowerment was a significant threat to toxic masculinity, chauvinism, and patriarchy. Men felt that empowering women would make them 'disrespectful / disobedient' to men.

Lastly, it was pointed out that women engage in activities and behaviors initially attributed to men to fit in the sector, such as drugs and substance abuse. There was a perception that drugs would 'harden' and make them tackle challenges in a masculine way. As a result, there was a recommendation to conduct training on substance and drug abuse to address this threat towards women empowerment.

1. Machakos Baseline Survey on gender mainstreaming in public transport in Machakos Town

The reports contain detailed findings on gender issues in the County's public transport system and the connected spaces. It also highlights critical recommendations to public transport stakeholders on best practices to promote the active participation of women and minority groups while advocating for safe spaces free from sexual and gender-based violence. The Study report paints a clear picture of gender aspects in the transport workforce in the county of Machakos. It further describes the prevalence of sexual and gender-based violence and the proposed measure employed by the County government, national government, community-based organizations, and other state and non-state actors to curb it. From the study, 46% of female workers in Machakos county have experienced sexual harassment at work primarily in the form of inappropriate physical contact and most fail to report due to a lack of precise complaints mechanisms. The most common forms of harassment include sexual harassment and verbal harassment. Some of the recommendations to the county and other stakeholders included; strengthening the soft infrastructure, creating more awareness on GBV, public transport companies (SACCOs) to develop gender key point indicators and mainstreaming gender in recruitment and promotion of their staff and capacity building workshops among women to bridge the gender skills gap.
Machakos Town Safety Audit Toolkit

The safety audit toolkit contains guidelines to be followed while conducting a safety audit of Machakos County. It explains safety parameters, processes, findings, and key recommendations to key stakeholders. It further describes spaces that need improvement to improve accessibility, safety, and cleanliness. The recommendations range from planning, street lighting, garbage collection and installation of CCTVs.

2. Machakos County Draft Public Transport Sexual Harassment Policy

The policy contains a background on the status of sexual harassment in Machakos County's public transport sector and the connected spaces. It also highlights existing legal policies and structures guiding the reduction of sexual harassment in public transport and connected areas. The policy will serve as a pilot to inform a national public transport sexual harassment policy for public transport systems and the connected spaces. In November, the procedure was subjected to peer review, with the Machakos County government team taking apart the process. It was further presented to the residents of Machakos County for validation, where more than 50 stakeholders signed to validate it. The Policy is yet to be vetted by the cabinet and the County assembly. Flone Initiative is currently collecting feedback from the public.

Give your feedback via the online survey HERE | Find the Online feedback form for the Draft Public Transport Sexual Harassment Policy HERE

3. Inclusive Transport Research Report

Flone Initiative commissioned a study to identify technical, social, and policy gaps and implementation challenges regarding inclusive mobility focusing on persons with disabilities and the elderly. Notably, many of the disabled will become aged, and many of the aged are disabled. The study identified that Matatus are the most commonly used forms of transport at 77%. Additionally, PWD believes that Matatu is unreliable to meet their specific travel needs at 37%. 47% and 43% of the respondents stated to have experienced challenges in boarding, alighting, and the cost of travel, respectively. Some of the respondents have also experienced sexual and gender-based violence. The report made recommendations to duty bearers, civil society, public transport companies and workers.
4. Leveraging Gender in E-mobility; Nairobi, Kisumu and Mombasa

In collaboration with the United Nations Environmental programme (UNEP), Flone Initiative conducted the study to establish the uptake of e-mobility by the public transport operators from Mombasa, Kisumu and Nairobi Counties. The study focused on 2 and 3 motorcycle taxis (Bodabodas and TukTuks). From the study, about 270 million motorcycles are on the road, with annual motorcycle sales accounting for about 52 million.

24.3% of Kenyan households owned bicycles, 2.3% owned motorcycles, while 5.5% owned either a tuk-tuk or a private vehicle. Men are more likely to own or know how to drive motor vehicles and more likely to have access to a cash income and control over family finances to afford and to pay for public transport. Despite the growth of two and three-wheelers in Kenya, women are disproportionately represented or integrated into the transport sector, which exposes them to socio-economic disadvantage and poverty (ADB 2013). The report sought to establish how women have been presented in e-mobility transport and the opportunities and challenges. From the study, it was confirmed that women continue to be underrepresented in the sector. Additionally, societal norms, prejudices and government regulations continue to hinder women from competing for investment opportunities in the industry. Some of the recommendations included encouraging more women to invest in the industry by ensuring they are granted fair, free and safe environments.
In collaboration with the UN-Habitat, Flone Initiative conducted a study to establish the gender dimensions for the city of Kigali. It sought to establish social enterprises’ steps, measures, and interventions to promote gender inclusivity. The preliminary findings were presented during the fourth Women and Transport Africa conference in December 2021. The study methodology involved interviewing key informants from the city of Kigali. The key informants were purposively selected representing e-mobility advisors, heads of programs, program coordinators, research fellows, policy analysts and some government agencies. Additionally, a case study of Safi Ride and Yego Motors was conducted to establish the gaps and opportunities for women in e-mobility transport. The study found that women continue to be underrepresented in the e-mobility space despite government Rwanda having over 51% of female leaders in the government. There was no correlation between the number of women in leadership positions and the number of women at the transport projects implementation levels. It was also established that the social enterprises in Kigali had put minimal guidelines to promote the inclusion of women.

ANNUAL REPORT 2021

2021 Financial Summary
Our annual composition on the source of funding for the financial year 1st February 2021 to 31st January 2022 in terms of percentages was:

- 87.42% Grants Received
- 0.17% Rental Income
- 10.05% Individual Donations (Cash & In-Kind)
- 0.41% Membership Fees
- 1.95% Investment Income - Interest Received

Annual Expenses composition based on income comprised of:

- 29.30% Project Expenses
- 53.13% Personnel Costs
- 16.99% Admin Costs
- 0.58% Finance Costs
Due to the covid-19 related shutdowns, meeting restrictions, lockdowns which continued in 2021 and many organizations forced to shut down due to freezing of donor funding or donors changing priorities to concentrate more on health. Some of our donors saw the need to keep our doors open hence converted some of the project grants funds to support our core organizational activities which included administration and personnel costs. This led to a reduction in project expenses as most were not undertaken due to the conversion of the funds.

The remaining project activities undertaken in 2021 show the percentage of which area was more active.
